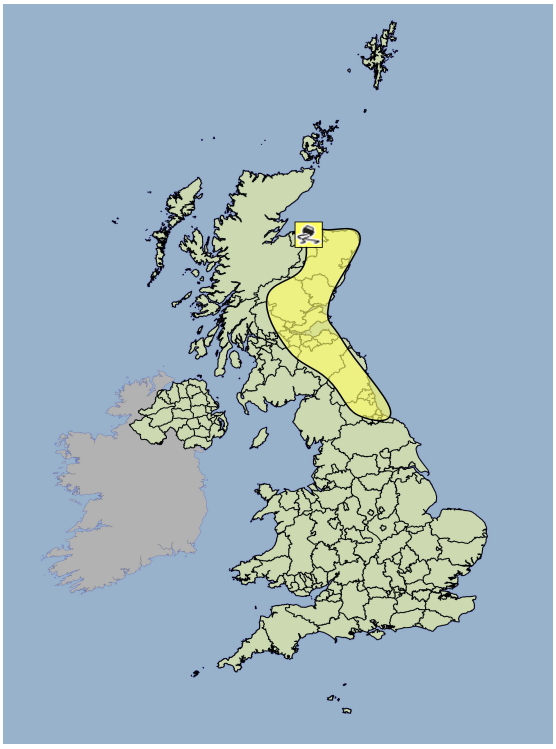
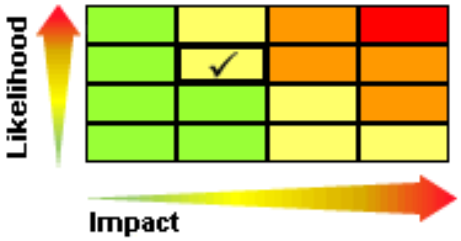
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Easterly winds will continue to feed wintry showers into eastern parts of the UK during Wednesday afternoon, though overnight these will become increasingly confined to eastern Scotland. The showers will leave wet roads which will allow icy patches to form as temperatures fall this evening. While the showers will become somewhat lighter and less frequent overnight, some localised snow accumulations remain possible.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Ice

Valid from 18:00 on Wed, 20th Mar 2013 until 09:00 on Thu, 21st Mar 2013

Icy stretches are expected to form during Wednesday night on untreated surfaces wet from sleet showers and melting snow during Wednesday afternoon.
Snow showers will steadily clear from north east England this evening, but will continue in some parts of Scotland overnight, especially over Angus and Aberdeenshire. These showers will be mostly light but could give additional accumulations of 1 to 3cm.

The public should be aware of possible travel difficulties.
